

EPA Finalizes the Clean Power Plan and Spiegel Launches Considering the Grid, a Blog on Energy and the Environment

August 1, 2015 | Lisa G. Dowden

On August 3, EPA released the final Clean Power Plan to reduce CO₂ emissions from existing power plants, as well as CO₂ performance standards for new power plants and a proposed federal implementation plan and model trading rules. In the attached newsletter, we provide a high-level overview of these rulemakings and next steps.

Additionally, Spiegel is pleased to announce the launch of its new blog, Considering the Grid, an online resource focused on following developments at the intersection of energy and the environment. Spiegel attorneys will maintain this blog to provide resources and status updates in this area, with a current focus on the Clean Power Plan. You can find us at www.consideringthegrid.com, where you can also subscribe to receive notifications of new posts via email.

info@spiegelmc

Related Practices and Services

- Electric
- Compliance and Enforcement

DOWNLOAD ATTACHMENT:

https://www.spiegelmc.com/wp-content/uploads/2018/09/Client-Alert-on-Clean-Power-Plan_2015_08_20_01_41_15.pdf